Feast of Trumpets (Rosh Hashanah) typified by Laban’s feast ending the 1st “week”

Re-edited 3/2/11

The second “week” of Jacob’s trouble began on Rosh Hashanah 2000 and ran through Rosh 2007. The Sabbatical year (Rosh 2000 to Rosh 2001) began with the 7th “day” (the Lord’s Day) on Rosh Hashanah 2000.

Laban threw a “feast” (Genesis 29:22) at the end of the 1st “week” which corresponds to the Feast of Trumpets (Rosh Hashanah) in the year 2000. This date also marked the breaking of the “lied-to” agreement (Oslo) between Israel (Jacob) and Laban (Arafat). On Rosh Hashanah 2000 the Intifada was declared, beginning a time of great distress in Israel. As the Sabbatical cycle wound down and the distress eased, the Sabbatical year (Rosh 2007-Rosh 2008) of “rest” approached. The Sabbatical year was a time of relative calm in Israel, for it was to be a period of “rest” from labor (the previous 14 years of laboring).

The Sabbatical year (Rosh 2007-Rosh 2008) proves the intactness of the Sabbatical cycle throughout the entire “time of trouble”. It is clearly seen that within the “time of Jacob’s trouble”, the worst part is that of the “6” years of Jacob laboring for his economic wealth! All of which leads to the Sabbatical year (Rosh 2014 to Rosh 2015) and the establishing of Christ’s Kingdom. The Lord is coming to save Jacob (Israel) OUT of the time of trouble (Jeremiah 30:7) to enter INTO His rest, typified by the Sabbath year, for Rosh Hashanah 2014 marks the beginning of the Sabbath rest!
